

1.

Overall design conveys jackbooted fascist thuggery similar to another political administration, in power in the '30s and '40s (hint: their word for "shock and awe" was "blitzkrieg")

Bloated typestyle indicative of an out-of-control budget deficit

Typestyle: "Neoconservative" available only leaning way, way too far to the right

Smaller cap height curious, considering Cheney's actually the guy running this country

The place to go to get the real facts on the misdeeds of this administration

Flag seems to be slithering, much like the nest of vipers currently in the White House

2.

Overall design critique: Scott Dadich, like me, has way too much time on his hands

The flag John Kerry fought in Vietnam to protect, while Bush was busy keeping Alabama safe from, ummm, let's see...Texas?

Karl Rove and "Last Action Hero's" Arnold Schwarzenegger agree: "Serifs are for girlie-men!"

You simply can't kern the "K" any closer to the "e," too bad Kerry can't change his name to, say, Berry, it would make a much better bumper sticker bottom line of type contains multi-syllabic, words confusing people who don't read and stuff
